

LONDONERS SCURRY TO SHELTER AS FLEET OF BOMBING PLANES APPEARS NEAR EAST COAST; CITY AT COMPLETE STANDSTILL FOR 2½ HOURS; BOMBS FAIL TO ARRIVE

Evacuation Takes Place Without Panic, Although Most of Population Was in Bed — Believed Part of Squadron Which Necessitated Two Raid Warnings in Paris This Morning.

(By Charles A. Smith, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Sept. 6—Appearance of a fleet of German bombing craft near the east coast of England sent residents of London scurrying to air-raid shelters this morning in the first lengthy air raid alarm since hostilities began in Europe.

For two hours and 25 minutes London was at a complete standstill, while the population of England kept calm, awaiting the crash of bombs that failed to come.

"We are officially informed," stated an announcement by the Ministry of Information, "that enemy aircraft were reported near the coast of England early this morning."

"So far as is known, they did not penetrate our defense at any point and no damage has been reported."

(Editor's note: The planes that gave London its first real scare today may have been part of the same squadron that necessitated two air raid warnings in Paris this morning.)

The alarms, which came as London was bathed in brilliant sunshine, caught most of the population in bed, but evacuation took place without panic.

PARIS, Sept. 6—Heavy bombing of German industrial centers in the Rhineland by British and French planes was revealed by the Paris press today, coincident with official announcement of new advances on the western front.

Soon after publication of official communiques number five, claiming that "several local advances were realized yesterday evening and during the night," the Paris Midi said:

"Allied planes severely bombed industrial centers in the Rhineland, notably Aix-La-Chapelle" (Aachen).

(Editor's note: A Brussels dispatch also reported heavy bombing in the neighborhood of Aachen.)

"The Germans have hard heads," Paris Midi stated, "but now they are beginning to understand."

The newspaper then published its brief mention of allied raids and called attention to reports of a Polish air raid on Berlin, which was denied by Germany.

(Editor's note: Aix-La-Chapelle, or Aachen, lies on the German side of the Belgian frontier, almost a direct line from Liege to Cologne. The Siegfried line or west wall, Germany's chief western fortification, is believed to lie considerably east of Aachen.)

Disclosure of the French air attack followed a night of excitement in Paris and other parts of France, as air raid warnings were sounded.

The Journal Officiel today published a decree making permanent civil service measures decreed because of the war emergency, while the Paris Midi issued a call for women pilots, listing bureaus where credentials may be presented and instruction received.

The official announcement that operations by the French forces on land, sea and in the air "were under way," indicates that in addition to the frontier fighting, the French and British military machines are continually active elsewhere.

Early fighting so far as laconic official communiques intimated is being concentrated along the 125-mile front between the Rhine and Monessle Rivers.

LONDON, Sept. 6—Germany is willing "to buy its old struggle with France" but will insist "unprovoked aggression," diplomatic correspondent official organ of the German Foreign Office declared today, according to a Reuter dispatch from Berlin.

BERLIN, Sept. 6—Two of four British scouting planes sighted over Hamburg were shot down, D. N. B., the German news agency, said today.

LONDON, Sept. 6—Bombing in the neighborhood of Aachen (Aix-La-Chapelle), German city on the French frontier, was reported in a Reuter dispatch from Brussels today.

The sounds of sirens and explosions along the Belgian frontier were heard today.

WAR DISPATCHES

By J. C. Ostreicher
I. N. S. Foreign Editor

The fall of Warsaw appeared imminent today, as German troops pressed forward into Poland rapidly, and mystery still enveloped the progress of hostilities on the western front.

The German high command insisted that not a shot had been fired on the Franco-German frontier but against this claim the Paris communiques told of contacts between German and French soldiers along the line.

It is evident from the French communiques that hostilities of considerable magnitude are under way in the Moselle Valley. Pressing half a dozen drives while the Polish fell back in strategic retreat, German columns continued their rapid advance of from 3 to 20 miles a day. In an irregular line more than 600 miles long the Germans have penetrated according to Berlin as deep as 60 miles. The army thrust toward Warsaw from East Prussia has taken Malawa and Pzarnec.

By International News Service

Meager details of fighting on the west front began trickling through censorship today.

Paris—Bombing of German industrial centers in the Rhineland by British and French planes was revealed by the Paris press.

Warsaw—Poland's army staged strong stand to protect the capital as the Germans were reported near Warsaw.

London—Sinking of the submarine which torpedoed the liner Athenia was reported.

Berlin—Nazi circles predict the fall of Warsaw within two weeks.

Washington—President Roosevelt mapped a series of moves to enforce two American neutrality laws and may make calling a special session of Congress unnecessary.

PROMINENT BUCKS COUNTY RESIDENTS SPEAK HERE

Edward B. Watson, Candidate
For Register of Wills, Addresses G. O. P. Women

MRS. COOPER SPEAKS

Three prominent Bucks County residents addressed those who assembled here last evening for the September session of Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women.

Introduced by the president, Mrs. Minerva Epstein, to the women who met in the Travel Club home were: Mrs. John W. Cooper, president of Bucks County Council of Republican Women; Edward B. Watson, Buckingham, Republican candidate for the office of register of wills; and Harris Holmes, president of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County which has headquarters at Buckingham.

The importance of the campaign of this Fall was noted by Mr. Watson, who stated that "the Republican majorities given I believe, will be an endorsement of Governor Arthur H. James' administration thus far." He continued by telling of the 47 million dollar deficit met by the present incumbent when he took over the governorship, when it was found necessary to have transferred 27 millions from the state highway department funds to the general fund, in order that James' promise that none would be in want might be kept. "And we must remember that Governor James has tried from the first minute to save the taxpayers' money wherever possible. Five the best access to information can do little more than guess.

THAT our national economic situation will be deeply affected is clear, but in what way and to what extent is a matter of opinion, not a matter of ascertainable fact. Equally uncertain, if the war is prolonged, is the question of whether we shall go in quickly on the side of France and England, or wait, as we did last time, until popular sentiment for such a course becomes very great; or whether we shall be able to stay out altogether.

THE President himself cannot answer these questions. Certainly, no one else can, and those profound international thinkers among us who pretend to know are just plain humbugs. Uncertainty clouds this country's future in every direction. However, there is one thing of which we can be sure. There is one thing about which there is no doubt whatever—and that is that from now on, if hostilities continue, the truth about Europe and what goes on there will be blurred, distorted, suppressed, camouflaged and concealed.

FROM now on there will be very little undiluted information, undoctored facts and uncensored

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Eleven Boy Scouts, with William Livermore, former Bucks County Scout Executive, as adviser, were guests of County Commissioner William Burgess, Jr., a few days ago, at his home, 771 North Pennsylvania avenue, Morrisville.

The boys camped on the Burgess lawn for one evening and with Commissioner Burgess, also Morrisville's mayor, visited Pennsbury, Summerseat, Vulcanized Rubber Company, and other interesting historic places in Morrisville. The Scouts had been passing through here on their way home to Butler, Pa., after visiting the World's Fair.

Livermore is now Scout executive for the Butler Arena Council.

Major William J. Ruch, squadron commander of the Pennsylvania Motor Police in Doylestown area, yesterday explained causes for which "jalopies" can be removed from the highway to conform to the new State law which became effective yesterday.

"Any automobile abandoned on the highway or involved in an accident," Major Ruch said, "can be ruled off the roads if it is found to be unfit to be registered by failure to pass inspection tests."

"Any automobile that is abandoned on a parking lot and the parking lot operator wishes to sell for storage charges can be denied registration if it is mechanically antiquated."

"Any automobile operating on the highways which, in the opinion of any police department, has appearance of defects, can be taken to an inspection station for tests. Failure to pass the tests will cause revocation of the vehicle license."

The Exchange Club of Newtown held its meeting, when the advantages of vocational agricultural education were explained.

After the dinner was over, the club was entertained by Samuel L. Horst, of Schwenksville, County Agriculture Supervisor of Bucks, Montgomery, and Lehigh counties.

Mr. Horst explained to the club the Room Shortage Likely To Confront Authorities In The Near Future

CLASSES OPEN TODAY

Some sections of the ninth grades of the Bristol public schools are crowded and a room shortage for these grades is a problem which is more than likely to face the school authorities within the near future.

This was made known to the School Board which met in regular monthly session last night to consider school business.

Warren P. Snyder, supervising principal, reported last night that the schools opened yesterday for the first

CARRIOLA-INZZURELLA

Mrs. Mary Inzzurella, Elm street, and Augustine Carriola, Palmyra, N. J., were united in marriage Saturday evening at six o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moffo, 303 Penn street, attended the couple. The bride wore vineyard red and grey crepe with dark blue accessories and a corsage of white asters. Mrs. Moffo was attired in gold crepe with black accessories, and wore orchid-toned asters. A reception was held after the ceremony at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Carriola went to Atlantic City for three days. The couple will reside in Palmyra.

role which vocational agriculture plays in the high school curriculum, its purposes and aims, and how the program is carried out.

Film slides were shown to the group of actual projects which were carried on during the past year in the different schools of Bucks and Montgomery counties. These pictures which showed agriculture students at work on their projects, were taken and developed by Mr. Horst on his visits to the different schools. Pictures were also shown of different shop and classroom set ups in various schools in the county, and the different types of projects which an agriculture student might carry.

The Upper Southampton school will open today at 9 o'clock. There will be half sessions during the first week.

There will be a faculty meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the school.

The playground has been graded and the three buildings and garage have been painted. Several minor repairs have been made on the interior of the buildings and new shades hung on the north and west sides of the high school building.

The shop has been moved from the basement of the high school building to the frame building on the school ground. The old shop room will be used for the commercial room.

Two new teachers have been appointed by the school board. Miss Mary O. Yearly, of Derry, a graduate of Seton Hill College, will teach home economics in the junior-senior high school and social studies in junior high school.

Charles Goodheart, of Lancaster, a graduate of Millersville State Teachers' College, will teach shop and junior high athletics.

Miss Bettyne Beatty, now Mrs. Hull, art instructor, will be at the local school a day and a half each week this year, instead of one day as last year.

Ocean City Resident Is Injured at Cornwells Hts.

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE READY TO FLY FOR POLAND IF NEEDED

Captain John B. Wilson, Bristol, Offers Services To Polish Government

AWAITING WORD TO GO

Willing to Man Combat Airplane in Great European Struggle

Captain John B. Wilson, of the United States Army Reserve Corps, who took an active part as an aircraft pilot during the Spanish civil war, has volunteered his services as such on the sides of the Polish forces in the present European crisis.

Captain Wilson, who is now serving as manager of the Dunlop store, Mill street, communicated with the Polish Embassy, Washington, D. C., last week, offering his services as a pilot of a combat ship. A reply was received by the localite, the Embassy officials stating they would contact him should his services be accepted.

"I suppose if I should be called, I would have to leave in a hurry," stated the one who has seen much experience in aviation circles. "But I am ready to go if I should be summoned."

Captain Wilson, who graduated from Michigan State College in 1931, had four years of R. O. T. C. training while there, finishing with a second lieutenant's commission. He received an appointment to the Air Corps branch of West Point at Randolph Field, Texas, serving the training course there, then graduating from Kelly Field, Texas, as a military pilot in 1934.

Captain Wilson, after extensive travel in the Orient and Europe, accepted a position as commanding officer of a CCC camp in New York State.

Under an assumed name, the localite called for the scene of the Spanish civil war, using a passport that had been "faked" for him. He had enough knowledge of Spanish to get by the Customs officials, attributing his slowness with the language to the fact he had "been in this country since childhood and could not speak my native tongue as I could years ago." On June 1, 1936, he reported to the Spanish Agent in Paris and was sent to the Spanish border the same afternoon, af-

"Smoketown" Boys Popular

Dear Stroller:
You have been running items pertaining to things around town. We have, here, something that has helped to spread the name of Bristol quite a bit.

A number of the boys, of Goodwill Hose Co., No. 3, have formed an organization called "Smoke-town." These boys have paraded all over the eastern section of our own State and have covered all of the State of New Jersey. Wherever they have paraded they have always brought home first prize. Some of their trips have been as far as Wildwood, N. J., Stroudsburg, Shamokin and Uniontown, and numerous other places.

These points are not so far away, but when you charter buses, the cost makes you think you are going to California. They also have to have music, which costs plenty, and then transport them to the parade also. Then the blackening that they use is regular minstrel black and costs $1.75 a jar, which will do about 40 men. They must also hunt around for a wagon to use as a fire apparatus. This is generally rented, at a cost of about $2. After they have the apparatus, they have to get a truck to transport same to the parade and then go out and hire a mule, which costs about $3 more. If anyone wants a nice job, let them go out and try and hire a mule.

All the money for these expenses the boys pay out of their own pockets. Each man is charged his share and he gladly puts his hand in his pocket and pays right on the line.

There was an officer of the Washington, D. C., Fire Company who followed these boys around for two years, trying to induce them to come to Washington and parade. He offered them $200 for expenses, but that would not cover half the expenses, as the buses for transportation alone would cost more than that.

These boys don't do so good in our home town, but when they get away, they sure do put on an act that is worth seeing, and they enjoy it themselves just as much as the spectators. They receive numerous invitations to parade, but cannot accept them all, as it would be too much of a drain on their pocketbooks.

These boys deserve a lot of credit and they have quite a few followers in town. I think you would be doing these boys a big favor if you would print this in your paper, as it would let the people of the town know that their town is being represented.

Yours truly,

ONE OF THE BOYS.

FUNDS FOR BELLIGERENTS

In view of that provision of the neutrality act which prohibits the collection of funds in this country for any belligerent government, it is reported from Washington that the State Department is prepared to promulgate regulations governing operations permitted by the language of this section of the act:

"Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit the solicitation or collection of funds to be used for medical aid and assistance, or for food and clothing to relieve human suffering, when such solicitation or collection of funds is made on behalf of and for use by any person or organization which is not acting for or on behalf of any such government, etc."

Officials, remembering the hundreds of millions contributed in this country for relief in the last war, expect to see a strong appeal made to Americans by the war-torn countries. Voluntary contributions may prove of considerable assistance in the absence of loans forbidden by the neutrality act.

These persons and organizations would have to provide to the Secretary of State certain information under oath. This would include their names and addresses, the means which they intend to use in soliciting or collecting contributions, the purpose for which the contributions were intended, the names and addresses of the person or organizations to whom the contributions would be sent, and the names and addresses of their responsible officers.

The persons or organizations collecting funds would have to submit to the state department each month a sworn statement showing the amount of the contributions received, and the disposition of them. But what of their final disposition? Could any rules which the state department might impose prevent diversion if those concerned so desired?

FOREST FIRES

This is the season of forest fires. Flames are taking a heavy toll of timber this year, due in part to the dry weather. In the heavy timber lands of the Northwest thousands of acres are being burned over, and the money losses are already estimated as likely to reach new records.

The United States has an average of nearly 172,000 forest fires each year, with an average annual loss in timber amounting to between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. In dry years, when the temperature is high and the winds bad, the loss may be many times that. In 1937 and 1938 over 150,000 acres of national forest were planted with 140,000,000 trees; but the average annual fire loss in national forests is 287,000 acres. In 1937, which had the smallest loss from forest fires of any year on record, 102,586 acres of national forest were burned, and in the whole country, 23,144,850 acres of forest were burned. The total has been as high as 52,666,460 acres, the figure for 1930.

The forest service of the Department of Agriculture, which has direct jurisdiction only over national forests, employs a permanent force of about 3,000 men, who have many duties other than fire prevention and fire fighting. During the seasons, which vary according to the section of the country, additional forest guards are employed on a temporary basis. About two-fifths of United States timber is national forest. The rest is state or privately owned.

news, about and pertaining to the conflict, available for public consumption. Of course, there will be plenty of events too big to be suppressed and plenty of facts which it will be considered good policy to disseminate. But the thing to remember is that from now on every fact we get from over there first will have been passed upon by a governmental authority and will come through only because it is approved as not likely to have an untoward effect upon the national cause. If there is any doubt about the effect, no chance will be taken.

ALREADY the channels of communication have been taken over. The British censor again has begun to function as he did twenty-five years ago. So far as the French are concerned, their censorship has been active and efficient for a good many weeks. From no country in Europe not completely neutral will it be possible now to send or receive an uncensored dispatch. From no belligerent, including England, will it be possible to send a news story with complete assurance that it will reach its destination exactly as written or, if it should, will arrive in time to make it print-able.

FROM now on it will be very difficult to tell what is propaganda and what is fact in the foreign news of the day. Facts will be smeared with propaganda and propaganda will be entwined around the facts. We are about to revert to that almost forgotten situation of twenty-five years ago when letters as well as press dispatches were censored, delayed and diluted. For four years of the last war there was no such thing as an uncensored news dispatch, no way of getting full and accurate accounts to the people unless fully approved by the military authority.

NOT until after the Armistice was it possible to print fully the facts. Then an American correspondent, returning on the first unconvoyed passenger ship in four years, published an uncensored and realistic picture of the situation as it existed in Paris on the verge of the Peace Conference. The shock of getting the unvarnished truth, after so long an abstinence, was so great that for three days the writer of the article was violently denounced from one end of the country to the other. But in three weeks every word he had written was proven up to the hilt.

DESPITE the censorship now clamped on telephone, radio and cable, much truth, of course, will come through. Correspondents of American papers abroad will know the truth, as they did in the last war, and, one way or another, will get a good deal of it past the censor. But, the day when it can all be told is gone and now it will be a fight to get the facts through. As before, the thing which will have uninterrupted flow is propaganda, and under these conditions propaganda is hard to distinguish from truth.

IT WAS quite a while after the last war when we discovered here that many things put over by the propagandists, blindly accepted and printed as true, were not true at all. A good many people still believe them to be so. Propaganda and censorship are horrid but essential parts of war. They are as inescapable as they are unwholesome. Both are with us now and it is a good thing to be frank about it. It may tend to keep people calmer in the days to come if this knowledge is kept well in mind. Whether it is done over the radio or in the press, this business of whipping up the emotions of the people without the facts is bad business—particularly for a neutral country not thoroughly to understand.

CHAPTER XXIV

Carol, Mike and Wish sneaked out to the butler's pantry and made themselves some sandwiches. They laughed a good deal as Wish made Mike forget how hurt and miserable she was. Carol was perched on a bench, eating olives and gesturing as she gave advice.

"I keep telling her, Wish, she's a fool to spoil Handsome. She won't be able to manage him. I couldn't do a thing with Dusty if I didn't put my foot down." Carol gave a fine imitation of putting the foot down, except that her heel hit Wish's toe. The din from the other room was increasing.

More people had come, so they had to leave their little retreat and join the rest in the noisy drawing room. Just then a pretty blonde exclaimed: "Must we take her along, too?"

"Certainly!" Handsome retorted. He thought it was funny. Then looking straight at Mike, the pretty blonde continued: "But Handsome, if we told her we didn't want her to go along, would she come just the same?" The blonde used baby talk very effectively, and everybody howled. Mike forced a laugh, too.

The party continued. Mike was sneezing inside.

"I'm going home, Wish," she said at last.

"I wouldn't. I think it would be a mistake, Mike."

"I'm tired. I have to get to work early in the morning. I live in Brooklyn and I can't stay out all night!" Mike's temper was up.

"Take it easy. We don't win a world's championship every day."

But the whole thing got too much for Mike. Finally she went over and pushed her way through the admiring women again and announced she had to leave.

Handsome came over to her when she came out of the bedroom with her coat and hat on. "If you do this silly thing, you'll be sorry." His voice was flat as he tried to keep down his anger.

"Handsome, I'm tired, and bored. I'm going home. Please, let me go. She felt dowdy, the only woman in the room not wearing a dinner dress.

"I'm not quarreling. I said not to go!" His anger blazed through.

Wish tried to intervene. "You stay, Mike."

"I haven't had time to congratulate you yet, Handsome. But it was grand!"

"Thanks." He stood looking at her, begging her, silently, not to go. "I can't go, Mike. You're making it hard for me, please stay."

"Good night!" And Mike was out the door with Wish following.

Mike was weeping hysterically when she got into Wish's car. He let her cry for a long time, until they reached the Brooklyn Bridge. Then he tried to soothe her.

Wish let her out at her door, and she slipped into the hallway. When he'd gone she walked around the block many times until all the lights were dimmed in their apartment, except the one in Jimmie's room. Then she went into the house.

It wasn't until the next day that Mike first heard of the girl called Iris Hansen.

across the photograph of Handsome and a girl called Iris Hansen. In one of the tabloids. It was taken at the Inferno. It showed crowds around his table, asking for autographs, and the girl called Iris, sitting beside him.

Mike was more reasonable this morning. Speaking to herself, she thought in this wise: "I must expect that. He's a famous person. He'll be photographed with many people. I must keep my head."

Six o'clock. Mike slowly checked up stock. He had not called, nor stopped to see her. Desperately she wondered if he had received her note. She could not walk across her lobby to see whether it was still in his box. The bellboys would know, and the room clerk. She couldn't!

Mike waited until seven. Then she started for home. But she could not go there. She walked over to Fifth Avenue and got on top of a bus. She rode for a long time, way up town and then back again to 42nd Street. At home they'd think she was with Handsome and they wouldn't question her. It was well after 11 when she got home. Tonight her mother was waiting.

"I wanted to talk to you, dear," Mrs. Shannon had been dozing in her chair. She looked faded and old, and Mike's heart smote her.

"Yes, Mother," she answered.

"Tell me all about the big day. And what did you two do tonight?"

Mike made some kind of answer but Mrs. Shannon sensed that something was wrong. "I saw that photograph in the paper, Mike. That's not right."

Mike laughed. "Mother, dear, he's famous. We must expect that. He'll have a lot of pictures in the newspaper, with a lot of people. We must get used to the idea. Don't you worry!" She dropped a kiss on her mother's head. "Go to bed now, Jimmie's awake but I'll read him to sleep."

"He waited up for you last night," Mrs. Shannon said.

"I just couldn't get home any earlier," but Mike could not meet her mother's eyes.

Jimmie's were sharp too. But she managed to satisfy him with her story of the game. That night after she got into bed, Mary was awake and she had to report further. There was no escape for Mike.

Next morning, before she left the house, she wrote Handsome another little note. She dropped it into the box at Times Square, knowing it would reach him by mid-afternoon at the latest.

At noon, Mr. Downey asked her to take some newspapers to the board room where the receivers were meeting. That gave her a chance to walk past the desk, glance at Handsome's box. Her note of yesterday was still there.

"He'll call me in a little while," Mike was getting jumpy.

Tonight was the dinner given by sports fans to the winning team. There's to be speeches and presents. It was a stag dinner and Mike planned to go home and listen to the broadcast with Jimmie.

"I'll feel better for he will call me then."

Another day. Mike fled home to hear the banquet put on the air. When Handsome's voice sounded, with its pleasant laughing drawl, she had to make an excuse to leave Jimmie's bedside. She could not bear it, so natural and casual.

Another day. And no word from Handsome. The people at the hotel were beginning to whisper. Mike and Handsome had had trouble. She wasn't seeing him any more. Nobody dared ask her. Toward night Wish came by, stopped off to talk to her. Even Wish didn't dare ask. The hurt in her eyes was too deep. He did not have the courage. He talked about Handsome casually, as though he was unaware that there was trouble.

Perhaps it was seeing it in black and white which so terrified Mike. Next morning when she got to work, somebody had left a newspaper marked for her to see. It was a paragraph in a Broadway column: "What national hero has switched from a redhead to a blonde, now that he's famous?"

Mike tucked the paper away and went on calmly. Today Mike's panic had turned into a rage. If he came, she wouldn't talk to him! Today's newspapers showed photographs of Handsome with the new car which had been given to him.

Mike could work up a fine case of indignation against Handsome. But, she would soften soon. She looked down at her ring now and then for reassurance. She knew Handsome loved her. He couldn't get along without her. He'd said so. Then anguish would engulf her. Three days and she had not heard one word from him!

Abjectly miserable, Mike went to a movie that night, stayed through two shows, huddled up in the back row. It was a sad picture. . . . It was almost midnight when she came home. But the whole flat was lighted. The family was waiting up for her.

"Where have you been? Handsome's been waiting to see you!" Mary cried.

"He's got a swell new car!" called Jimmie from the bedroom. "He took Mom and Mary for a ride."

Mike could not answer. She managed to say something about working late, and went on into her room. When Mary came, she pretended she was asleep. . . .

Next day, at his usual breakfast time, Handsome came up to her counter. Mike knew the head bell-boy edged closer to listen.

"Good morning, Mike. Sorry I missed you last night."

"I'm sorry, too." She could barely get the words out.

"Your mother invited me for supper, tonight. All right with you?"

"Yes."

"What time are you through?"

"Six, as usual."

Odd how a few little words could make the world seem so different! But when she climbed in beside him in the handsome new sedan, it was difficult for them to talk. Mike blundered in everything she said, she was so afraid of breaking down.

"I'm so sorry, Larry. Forgive me."

"That's all right. I was furious with you, but I got over it."

"I suppose I was childish."

"You were."

His tone made Mike angry. "You'd have been angry at me under similar circumstances."

GRAND THEATRE

"Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation"—or does he? Not until he has taken us sleuthing on a pulse-stirring adventure into the Arabian Desert where the crown of the Queen of Sheba is unearthed; not until he brings a jewel syndicate to justice in San Francisco and exposes one of the most notorious jewel crooks ever to operate—not until then does he get his holiday!

The 20th Century-Fox picture which opens at the Grand Theatre, today only, with Peter Lorre again portraying the mysterious Mr. Moto, gives a new thrill to the followers of this series, certainly increasing his popularity with the fans and proving again that crime does not pay.

Norman Foster has done a skillful job of directing the screen play on which he collaborated with Philip MacDonald.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Bulldog Drummond's Bride" is the offering at the Bristol Theatre for today and tomorrow.

The famous film sleuth "Bulldog Drummond" gives an action-filled thriller, with romantic excitement thrown in.

John Howard appears as "Drummond"; with Heather Angel as his fiancée.

WOLGAST IN GOOD SHAPE TO MEET MAGLIONE HERE

Both Boys Tell Promotor Joe Gruerio They Are Ready For The Bell

VETERAN VS. YOUTH

Sam Sindora, Trenton, To Meet Willie Coleman, Phila., In Semi-Windup

Both Midget Wolgast, former midget champion of the flyweights, and Tony Maglione, of Trenton, are in shape for their meeting in the eight-round windup tonight at St. Ann's Open Air Arena here. Both boys told Promotor Joe Gruerio they were ready for the bell. The clash will bring together a veteran of the ring who has been on the highest rung of pugilism's ladder of fame and a youngster fighting to reach that point. For the veteran, Wolgast, he will be trying to keep his place within the ring as defeat means retirement. For Maglione, defeat or victory, he will be ahead. In defeat, he will leave the ring much wiser and he will be a better fighter in the future. In victory, he will still be more intelligent, and his manager can expect to get his fighter into the money class. When a meeting of this type is brought about, it generally results in a good fight for the fans.

The semi-windup of six rounds will show the promising Sam Sindora, of Trenton, meeting Willie Coleman, of Philadelphia. Sindora, who has been going along in a winning manner of late, has his work cut out for him when he meets Coleman. A club fighter, pure and simple, Coleman climbs in from the top of the first bell and never stops. He is a puncher of power as he has had such fellows as Bobby Masters and others on the floor. He boxed Masters three of the most sensational contests ever seen in Atlantic City, recently. In two of the bouts he had Masters down and in distress on several occasions. Sindora must be in shape for this contest if he expects to come off the winner.

Another six will show Buck Street, of Doylestown, meeting Able Kaufman, of Philadelphia. Three rounds are scheduled. In one bout we have Gene Kirk, of Philadelphia, meeting Tally Chiara, of Bristol; another shows Lenny Dever, of Bristol, meeting Dick Harris, while the first contest will show Tony Puccinetti, of the famous restaurant in Trenton, meeting Howard "Kid" Sewell, of Philadelphia. The first contest will enter the ring at 8.45 p. m.

SCHEDULE TWO PLAY-OFF GAMES FOR WEEK-END

Two play-off games will be scheduled for the next week-end, according to an agreement reached by Managers Andy Pfaffenrath and Joe Diamanti of the contesting teams of the Bristol Twilight League.

That is, two will be played if necessary, for as the matter now stands Rohm and Haas has won two straight and needs but one more victory to clinch the crown and if this happens on Saturday then the game scheduled for Sunday will be cancelled.

The chemical workers won the series with the Hall Aluminum nine, winning two consecutive games and now seems to be headed for the crown by whipping the Diamond club.

Rod and Gun Club Plans For Its Annual Outing

EDGELEY, Sept. 6.—The Edgely Rod & Gun Club will hold its 5th annual outing at Lane's Park, Edgely, along the Delaware River on Sunday.

The following events have been scheduled and committees appointed: Trap shoot committee, William Welker, Joseph King, Harry Pittman, Samuel Hellings; splashboard, Fred Hibbs, John Wolvin and Francis Abbott; 22 rifle, Frank Lynn, Peter Mannherz, Alpheus Smyrl; bait casting, Horace Walker, James Turner; refreshments, Howard Amole, James Daniels, Nicholas Mannherz; gate, Luther Hilgen-dorf, Melvin Locke; special committee for women's and children's events, George Bintliff, Jr., Charles Phillips.

A number of prizes have been selected for each event.

The above-named committees will have full charge of the events for which they have been named, and events will get started promptly at one o'clock. All members are supposed to be at the park on Wednesday evening at six o'clock to get the grounds in condition for the outing.

millions were saved by discharge of those state employees who had no work to do, or business employees who had no typewriters to work on. It is true there are more on relief now than previously, but we must remember that the State was "short-changed" by President Roosevelt and Guffey. We have contributed per capita in Pennsylvania, $164 in taxes, to the national government, and received in return $121, while the state of Mississippi contributed $9 and received in return

PUTTING U. S. SEAL ON STRICT NEUTRALITY

Secretary of State Cordell Hull (left) watches an aide affix the official seal of the United States upon the neutrality proclamation which previously had been signed by President Roosevelt and Mr. Hull. Later in the day the President was to issue a proclamation placing an embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerent nations, under terms of the existing neutrality law. This is a photo from Washington.

$134. In Washington, those now in power, don't judge relief by human misery, but they judge it upon how you vote."

Mr. Watson informed the women present that since Governor James took office in January "Private industry has spent 33 million dollars. It has shown that confidence has returned to the business-men of Pennsylvania since the Republicans won last Fall."

The tragic and degrading circumstances found in Harrisburg with the swearing in of Mr. Levine as a senator after he had been denied a seat, and the subsequent failure on the part of the Democratic powers to recognize newly-elected Republicans was gone over. "We must never go back to that kind of a government in Pennsylvania," admonished Mr. Watson. He urged the voters to elect their Republican ticket from top to bottom. "We will face one of the most important elections next year that America has ever faced, and we want to be ready for it. Let's join hands and make a solid front, and send to Washington as president next year a Republican."

Mrs. Cooper impressed upon her hearers the high type of efficient, economical and sane government given by the Republican party. In her opening remarks she told that her interest in the party is because it builds up citizenship. Some time was given to consideration of affairs in the "old world," with the hope expressed that such conditions never come to these shores.

The reasons for necessity in lining up with one of the two main political parties found in the United States, stated Mrs. Cooper, "is because one is a check and balance against the other."

"Men come and go, but the policies, platforms and principles remain. Republicanism's avowed principles built up this county. It is a legacy handed to Republicans."

That there is no contest within the party in Bucks County at the forthcoming election was one fact which party members should be proud of, stated Mrs. Cooper, who added to her interesting discourse by telling of the benefits obtained through membership in the State Council of Republican Women, with subsequent information available at all times.

Greetings were brought to the Lower Bucks County Council by the president of the Local Republicans group, Mr. Holmes, who, told of the excellent growth of that organization.

The president, Mrs. Epstein, called upon Mrs. Benjamin Lesseig to lead the group in salute to the flag at the outset of the meeting, with singing of "America" being accompanied by Mrs. John W. Moyer. Record of the June meeting and treasurer's report were given by Mrs. Walter Cooper and Mrs. Moyer, respectively.

Appointed as members of the nominating committee are: Mrs. L. B. Giron, Mrs. Horace N. Davis, Mrs. Horace Fleckenstine, Mrs. Leo Lynn, Mrs. Anna Wilkie, Mrs. Walter Fagan, Mrs. Earl Ford, Mrs. David Neill, Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg, Mrs. Morris Dayhoff.

A question and answer period, presented by Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg and Mrs. Benjamin Lesseig proved highly enlightening. A card party is being arranged, committeemen being named by the president, last evening.

Charge "Spending" Campaign Planned On Grand Scale

A "spending" campaign on the grand scale is envisioned by backers of the plan to slap tolls on the sixteen free Delaware river bridges between Trenton and Milford, according to new revelations made by the Keystone Automobile Club.

The Club, which is vigorously fighting a proposal to exploit motorists to the tune of $3,108,445 per year, charges that estimates for new bridges are "wildly extravagant."

The estimates, it is declared by J. Maxwell Smith, Keystone's general manager, are contained in a report submitted to the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission in support of the tolls plan. (The Commission has "tabled" the report, which was prepared by the bridge engineers without specific authorization or direction. The Club reiterates its charge, however, that the undercover campaign to win approval of the plan, backed by New York financial interests, is by no means halted.)

A total of $20,500,000 is set up by the engineers for new construction, out of the $46,000,000 expected to be gouged from motorists over a period of 15 years. Success of the scheme is contingent upon acceptance by Pennsylvania and New Jersey of a plan by which each State will receive $4,115,239 as its share of bridge costs to date. Permanent control would be vested in the Commission, with authorization to float a bond issue and impose tolls on all sixteen bridges in the 112-mile stretch of river between Trenton and Milford.

The following schedule of "estimates" for new bridges and approaches is contained in the report, according to Club officials:

Morrisville-Trenton (Calhoun street), $4,550,000; Yardley-Wilburth, $3,000,000; Washington Crossing, $3,000,000; New Hope-Lambertville, $2,500,000; Lumberville-Raven Rock, $300,000; Riegelsville, $300,000; Easton-Phillipsburg (Northampton street), $3,000,000; Upper Mt. Bethel-Delaware (new floor and masonry), $100,000; Portland-Columbia, $1,200,000; Bushkill-Platbookeville (no present bridge), $800,000; Milford-Montague, $600,000; Removing abandoned bridges, $400,000.

"The estimates on most of these structures are regarded as wildly extravagant," continued Mr. Smith. "The present bridge at Calhoun street, for example, is 1274 feet long. The estimated cost of replacement is given as $4,550,000. By way of comparison, the bridge over the Susquehanna River between Wrightsville and Columbia, Pa., is 5532 feet long, and was built at a cost of $2,800,000.

"Another example may be cited in the Raritan River bridge, near New Brunswick, which has been awarded national recognition as one of the most beautiful bridge structures in the country. It is 1902 feet long, and its cost was $1,509,473.

"The present Yardley bridge, replacement cost estimated at $3,000,000, is 903 feet long, and the Washington Crossing bridge is only 875 feet long, with its replacement also reckoned at $3,000,000. It is admitted that in building new bridges at these locations provision should be made for safe and adequate approaches, but even with these included the estimated costs are apparently away out of line.

"In the circumstances, the conclusion is inescapable that the motorist is regarded as a moneyed goose ready to be plucked. From what we have heard in the last week or two, we believe the backers of this plucking enterprise are about to be disillusioned. Motorists of both New Jersey and Pennsylvania are aroused to the tolls danger, and are in no mood to be kicked around either by financiers or politicians."

exception in the Narcotic Drug Act of 1917, which permits "licensed physicians" to possess and prescribe narcotic drugs. The Commonwealth, on the other hand, contended that osteopaths are not "physicians" within the meaning of the drug act.

Judge Boyer held that practitioners licensed under the state laws are "physicians" within the intent of the Narcotic Drug Act. The Court based its conclusions principally on two grounds, namely: that the Act of 1909 regulating the practice of osteopathy, and its amendment of 1923, repeatedly refer to such practitioners as "osteopathic physicians," and that, therefore, it must be assumed that the Legislature meant that they were physicians within the ordinary and broad meaning of the term "physicians."

Judge Boyer further held that the nature of the disease which osteopathic physicians are authorized to treat, particularly minor surgery and obstetrics, require the use of narcotics and that the Legislature was familiar with the acts regulating osteopathy.

This question has never before been decided in Pennsylvania, but the decision is in harmony with decisions in several other jurisdictions, particularly Michigan, New York and the United States Courts.

Schools To Be Congested In The Ninth Grades

session of the term and that the day was devoted to reorganization. Today will be the first official day of school continuing for half-day sessions for the balance of the week and starting the full sessions on Monday, September 11th.

Registration of new pupils in the first grades for the first day showed the following:

Bath street, 32; Wood street, 22; Jefferson avenue, 20; Harriman building, 38. There were 13, 7, 7, and 12 repeaters in each of the previously mentioned buildings.

Thirty-seven registered from Bristol Township and 30 from the Parochial school in the ninth grade high school. There were approximately 152 promoted from the eighth grade into the ninth grade, but the number which will actually return and also the number of repeaters in this grade cannot be determined until school has been in session a few days.

There was a general meeting for teachers held yesterday afternoon at which time all matters of policy and reorganization for the coming school year were discussed. New teachers were presented and a general discussion of the program for the year was held. There will be group meetings throughout the week. All teachers were present with the exception of Miss Miller, whose father is seriously ill.

The Board voted to advance the teachers a half-month's salary.

Miss Appleby was directed to teach the group of children taught by Miss Evans last year at Washington street building.

An electric sewing machine was demonstrated to the Board and the Board instructed Mr. Snyder to purchase at least three machines and not more than four machines for the domestic science department.

Treasurer Emil Metzger reported a balance on hand of $4,998.73 and he was given authority to transfer $10,000 to the sinking fund out of additional moneys received.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property Committee, reported that all buildings are in condition for the opening of the schools and that the heating systems are ready to operate when weather conditions make their operation necessary.

The boilers have been tested and the incinerator at the high school enlarged.

Mr. Snyder was authorized to procure bids and order necessary filing cabinets.

ter receiving a supply of money, Captain Wilson was amused at the smile of the border guard when the faked passport was examined. He witnessed his first bombing of a city in Port Boa.

At Los Alcazares Captain Wilson in flight with Major Diaz satisfied that officer that he knew sufficient about combat planes to be of great aid to his troops.

Things happened thick and fast in many of the combats the Bristolian was called upon to enter, and experiences are such that he will never forget as plane dived at plane, each formation intent on downing the other.

While attending a motion picture show in Madrid, during one of his two free week-ends, while in Spain, Captain Wilson states that the theatre was bombed, three of the upper stories being blown off. The hotel at which he registered was bombed during his first visit to that city.

The seven months spent in Spain are described by Captain Wilson as the most exciting and interesting of his life.
